Arrest made in attack on Milwaukee mayor

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett was hospitalized Sunday after a man attacked him with a metal pipe as the mayor tried to assist a grandmother screaming for help near the Wisconsin State Fair.

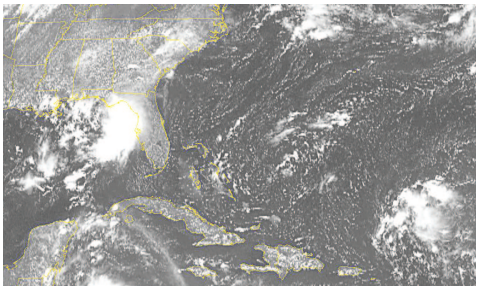

Barrett, 55, was in stable condition at a local hospital with a fractured hand and other head and hand wounds, official said.

The mayor had gone to the fair outside Milwaukee on Saturday night with his sister, two daughters and a niece. As the group left and walked to Barrett's car, they heard a woman screaming for someone to call 911, police said.

Police said the woman was a grandmother who was trying to protect her 1-year-old granddaughter from a 20-year-old man, an assault authorities characterized as a domestic dispute.

The suspect then fled the area when he heard sirens. He was arrested on Sunday at a Milwaukee home, and police recovered the alleged weapon. The woman and baby were uninjured.

Milwaukee Police Chief Edward Flynn said authorities had no reason to believe the suspect knew it was the mayor he was attacking.

Tropical ABCs

After a slow start to the Atlantic tropical season, forecasters are monitoring three named storms—Ana, Bill and newly formed Claudette. Forecasters expected Claudette to come ashore late Sunday or early Monday with winds from 50 to 60 mph.

Here are some other tropical facts:

- » Ana: The weakest of the bunch with winds of 40 mph. It's expected to intensify as it heads toward the Leeward Islands and the Caribbean.
- » Bill: The strongest of the bunch with winds of 60 mph. It is expected to become a hurricane Tuesday and potentially a Category 3 storm by Wednesday as it stays northeast of Puerto Rico.
- » Claudette: After it makes landfall east of Pensacola, Fla., it is expected to move north into central and northwestern Alabama, bringing heavy rains.

Obama goes west

President, family trade city life for wilderness on weekend trip

Associated Press

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz.

President Obama is hardly the consummate Western outdoorsman.

The Marlboro Man he's not.

He's spent his adult life in big cities—New York, Chicago and, now, Washington. Basketball, golf and bodysurfing are how this jock rolls. Indoor gym workouts of cardio exercise and weight training are the norm. Hunting, climbing, rafting—not so much.

Yet there he was on a summer weekend, enthusiastically soaking in America's vast wilderness. He toured Yellowstone National Park, checking out Old Faithful, and then set his sights on the Grand Canyon, where he strolled trails along the rim. He cast a fly while fishing in a Montana river.

"Oh, that's pretty good. Cool! Look at that. That's a geyser there," Obama said Saturday as the first family watched the world's most famous geyser erupt. Earlier, the Obama entourage traipsed across

HIS SERIOUS AND FUNNY SIDE

Obama held town hall style events to plug his efforts to overhaul health care. In Belgrade, Mont., he opened with this comment: "Here in Montana you've got bears and moose and elk. In Washington, you have mostly bull. So this is a nice change of pace!" He chuckled at the line.

wooden walkways in the steamy Black Sand Basin, a brilliant-hued hydrothermal spot in the park dotted with hot springs, geysers, mudpots and fumaroles.

With the wonders of his country at his disposal, Obama did things that might seem a little out of his comfort zone. It's safe to say that this Hawaiian-born president has spent more time on beaches and in cities than he has in the mountains of the West.

But this is also a guy who clearly has a zest for recreation and a curiosity about the diverse nation he governs. He seems game for trying just about any sport or activity. He seems intent on broadening his kids' interests and his own.

"He wants very much to see and share the outdoors and some of the beautiful places in the country with his daughters," press secretary Robert Gibbs said. "He's always tremendously enjoyed being outside with his family."

In the East Gallatin River near a private residence, Obama spent about two hours in pouring rain and unseasonably chilly temperatures, making good on a campaign promise to learn how to fly fish when he returned to Montana. Locals called it perfect catch-and-release weather.

How'd he do?

Fishing guide Dan Vermillion, who runs the Sweetwater Fly Shop in Livingston, Mont., reported that Obama hooked half a dozen fish but he didn't land any.

But Gibbs, who accompanied Obama, was less diplomatic: "Not as well as he wanted. He was a bit frustrated."

The lifeline.

The answer.

Getting cozy with social media

Justin Thomas wouldn't dream of sleeping through the social media craze that's sweeping the Internet, although if he did he'd be quite comfortable.

No, not because he can afford to miss it, but because he makes pillows. Social media pillows.

Thomas runs Craftsquatch, an online shop on etsy.com, a creative marketplace.

If you've never seen a Twitter or Facebook logo on a pillow, it's because you never met someone like Thomas—someone who loves to sew as much as he loves social media.

"I was struggling to find a paycheck in Chicago, which is difficult when people with degrees are vying for the same office jobs. So to pass the time I became a social media junkie," Thomas, 24, of Morton Grove said.

Now, if you think the pillows are an amazing story, there's more. Thomas is a one-man operation. Every pillow is made to order.

Thomas doesn't seem to mind that he's taking on a lot. So what's the process?

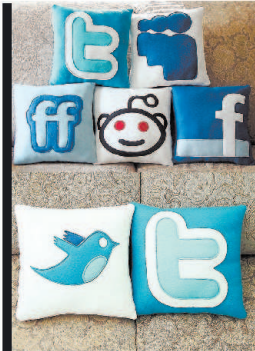

"Depending on the number of pillows I usually take a whole day to cut a bunch of fabric. The next day I'll lay them out and start the stitching, and the next day I'll continue that and start stuffing," Thomas said. "And then packing and shipping, so the shipping time varies but right now it's at one to two weeks."

Besides the Twitter and Facebook logos, Thomas offers a variety of Internet-themed designs that range from the RSS feed symbol and Flickr logo to the infamous Twitter Fail Whale. When I mentioned that I wasn't sure which one I wanted—I have it narrowed down to the Twitter logo and Fail Whale—Thomas warned me that it's going through a slight revision and therefore somewhat backordered. He said the Fail Whale pillow is the most requested and most difficult one to make.

But while Twitter might go down unexpectedly, Thomas says he's always thinking about what to do next. His home page sums it up pretty well.

"Keep an eye out for some new kick-butt, nerdy designs continually coming!"

Is a pillow one of the most unique uses of social media you've seen? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. I'll craft up a response right away.

Chicago man goes missing in Costa Rica

Chicago Tribune

The search continued Sunday in a forested national park in Costa Rica for a Chicago doctoral student missing since last week.

Volunteers from the Chicago area are assisting the local Red Cross and Costa Rican authorities to comb the rugged Parque Nacional Rincon de la Vieja in Costa Rica for the whereabouts of David Gimelfarb, 28, a student at the Adler School of Professional Psychology in Chicago. Family said Gimelfarb, a resident of Buena Park, has not been seen since Aug. 11, when he was seen by a park ranger.

"I am just praying for him," said Gimelfarb's mother, Luda, on the phone Sunday morning from Costa Rica, where she is helping organize the search.

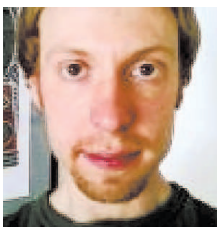

"He's an experienced hiker. He's not a professional, but he's experienced enough to take care of himself. All I can do is hope for a safe return."

Search teams are covering the area on foot and on horseback, Luda Gimelfarb said. But the dense trees and vegetation are making it difficult to search by air, she said.

According to a Costa Rican police report filed by his father, David Gimelfarb was staying at the Hotel Guachipelin in Guanacaste province. Roma Gimelfarb tried calling his son at the hotel on Aug. 12, but he couldn't reach him. The hotel told him his son left a day before for the national park and had not returned.

Gimelfarb's parents have sought help from officials at the American embassy in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, but have been disappointed with what they believe is a slow response, Luda Gimelfarb said.

"The American embassy does not want to get involved. We contacted them and they did not offer to help look for him," she said.

Pothole war victory

New funding good news for motorists driving on area's worst roads

Chicago Tribune

It seemed like the potholes ran as deep as the Grand Canyon on Grand Avenue east of the Kennedy Expressway.

Despite dozens of trips by pothole-patching crews over the last two winters to repair the crater-pocked section of Grand between Halsted and Desplaines Streets, the effort did little if any good.

At least not until this summer, when the old deteriorated pavement was removed and Grand was resurfaced, providing a new service life of seven to 15 years for the high-traffic arterial street.

It was just one small victory in the difficult war against literally millions of potholes and dangerously worn streets in the Chicago area.

But for the first time since state funding for many routine rehabs of infrastructure dried up in 2006, the tide is now starting to turn in the right direction with the help of hundreds of millions of dollars in new federal and state funding.

About 90 individual resurfacing projects worth more than $194 million are under way this summer on major arterial streets in Chicago and across the six-county region under the direction of the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Work is more than 90 percent completed on 18 of those projects,

WORK ZONES AHEAD

A total of 115 resurfacing jobs are planned on state routes in northeastern Illinois, officials said.

according to IDOT spokeswoman Marisa Kollias.

Those projects range from about four miles of Ogden Avenue in the west suburbs, to sections of Touhy Avenue in Cook County.

In addition, the City of Chicago plans to resurface 37 individual sections of city streets this year, totaling 31 miles at a cost of about $86 million, according to the Chicago Department of Transportation.

Eight resurfacing projects have begun or been completed on sections of Addison Street, Lincoln Avenue, Peterson Avenue, 18th Street, Division Street, Grand Avenue, Ogden Avenue and Pulaski Road, CDOT spokesman Brian Steele said.

Work is expected to start in the next two weeks on at least a dozen more locations, he said.

The money to do the badly needed maintenance comes courtesy of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, better known as the Obama administration's economic stimulus program to put people to work on shovel-ready projects.

But there's more.

Chicago received about $15.6 million for arterial resurfacings from the state's mini-capital improvement spending bill that was passed in April. That funding will leverage an estimated $62.2 million in federal funding, providing enough money to resurface about 70 to 80 miles of city streets through next year, Steele said.

"Over the next 12 months using federal and state funding, we will do as much resurfacing as we had done in the four years prior combined," Steele said.

Network delay good for 2016 bid

The United States Olympic Committee has managed to defuse another dispute with the International Olympic Committee, one that threatened to blow up on Chicago’s 2016 Summer Olympic bid.

After its chairman, Larry Probst, met in Berlin on Saturday morning with IOC President Jacques Rogge, the USOC announced Sunday it will hold off indefinitely on the planned 2010 launch of the U.S. Olympic Network, its TV venture.

By conceding to the IOC’s demand that it delay implementation of the network until a variety of issues can be resolved, Probst has allowed the Chicago bid to stop being on the defensive as it was forced to explain the USOC’s actions to the voters who will choose the 2016 host Oct. 2.

Speaking with a handful of U.S. reporters in Berlin as the statement was being released Sunday, Probst said, “The USOC wants to do everything it can to help support the Chicago bid. If this meeting with President Rogge and the decision we have made is going to be beneficial to the bid, I think that is terrific.”

Chicago 2016 Chairman Patrick Ryan applauded the action in a composed public statement while undoubtedly doing verbal cartwheels in private.

Probst also may have aided the bid by admitting the USOC mishandled the July 8 announcement of its network plans, which came one day after the IOC had sent the USOC a strongly worded cease-and-desist letter.

“In hindsight, it probably could have been handled more effectively and more thoughtfully,” Probst said. “But as a result of conversations I’ve had with President Rogge, I think we’re on a good track.”

Probst also admitted the USOC “underestimated the intensity of the (negative) reaction we got from multiple constituencies.”

For the past three years, there had been an increasingly heated war of words on the revenue issue between leading IOC members, including Denis Oswald of Switzerland and Hein Verbruggen of the Netherlands (now a former member), and former USOC Chairman Peter Ueberroth.

“The only thing that can cost Chicago the Games is continuing squabbles between the two parties,” NBC Sports Chairman Dick Ebersol told the Tribune after the network quarrel between the USOC and the IOC broke out. “And this one clearly is all on the USOC, no two ways about it.”

Man injured by sailboat boom on Lake Michigan

A boater was taken to a Chicago hospital in critical condition Sunday afternoon after being struck on the head by a swinging boom on a sailboat on Lake Michigan. The incident occurred at about 1:30 p.m. about five miles off 79th Street, said Chicago Fire Department spokesman Chief Joe Roccasalva. The boom swung around and struck the man on the head, knocking him into the water, unconscious.

Other people on the boat got him back on board, Roccasalva said. The man wasn’t breathing, so the other boaters administered CPR and called 911.

Medical personnel on the fire department’s fast-rescue motorboat arrived within minutes. By that time the boaters had revived the man, who became “disoriented and combative,” Roccasalva said. The fire department paramedics transported him to Belmont Harbor, where a waiting ambulance took him to Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Chicago’s taking Monday off

Many city offices will be closed Monday for a reduced-service day as part of efforts to balance the 2009 budget.

City Hall, public libraries, health clinics and most city offices will be closed, according to a news release.

As part of the 2009 budget, and without pay for affected city employees, reduced-service days also will be held on the Friday after Thanksgiving and on Christmas Eve.

On the reduced-service days, the city will have only the minimum amount of staff for essential city services. The reduced staffing will not apply to police, fire or other direct public safety providers, the city said.

City garbage collection and street sweeping will not take place on Monday, with those pickups or routes expected to be delayed one day.

The 2009 budget expects to save a total of $8.3 million over the three reduced-service days.

Weather causes airport delays

As thunderstorms swept through the area Sunday, the National Weather Service issued a flood warning for urban areas and small streams. The bad weather also caused delays at Midway and O’Hare, according to the Chicago Department of Aviation. Meanwhile, ComEd spokesman Jeff Burdick said the company was seeing “a couple thousand” customers without power, but those outages were not likely due to rain.

Man shot in Bronzeville

A 25-year-old man was shot in the chest Sunday morning in Bronzeville. Police responded to several shots fired in the 4700 block of South Evans Avenue about 2:25 a.m., said Chicago Police News Affairs Officer Amina Greer.

7 hurt in South Shore crash

Five firefighters and two others were hurt Saturday when a fire engine collided with another vehicle at 67th Street and Jeffery Avenue in South Shore, a Fire Department spokesman said. A car collided with the fire engine as it was eastbound on 67th Street, police said. The fire engine then struck a pole. The driver of the vehicle, Michael Quinn, 30, of the 2100 block of East 72nd Street, was cited, police said.

1,887 guns turned in Chicago police, community leaders and parents of gun violence asked the public to take part in Gun Turn-in day Saturday, getting a firearm off the streets with “no questions asked” in return for a gift card. Turning in an assault weapon was worth $100; a handgun garnered $50; and a pellet gun, BB-gun or replica gun was worth $10. Police said 1,887 guns were turned in.

Bollywood star on airport incident: Unfortunate

9 ROSEMONT Bollywood superstar Shah Rukh Khan on Saturday downplayed being questioned at a U.S. airport, saying it was part of a necessary but unfortunate procedure.

Khan, one of the Indian film industry’s biggest stars, is in the U.S. to promote his new film, “My Name is Khan,” which is about racial profiling.

He told Press Trust of India news agency that he was detained because his name came up on a computer alert list at Newark Liberty International Airport in New Jersey. However, U.S. customs officials told The Associated Press that Khan was questioned as part of a routine process that took 66 minutes.

“I told them I am a movie star,” Press Trust quoted Khan as saying.

WHO IS HE?

Khan, 44, has acted in more than 70 films, and has consistently topped popularity rankings in India for the past several years.

The reported detention made top news on TV stations in India.

Khan told reporters in suburban Chicago on Saturday that he did not want an apology from the U.S. government. Asked about what happened, he simply said: “I think it’s a procedure that needs to be followed, but an unfortunate procedure.”

Khan made his comments after appearing at an Indian festival in Rosemont and did not mention the incident in his remarks to the crowd.

U.S. Bureau of Customs and Border Protection spokesman Elmer Camacho said Khan was not detained.

“His documents and papers were checked, which were found to be in correct order, but it took a little longer because his bag was lost by the airline.”

Better than the best

Y.E. Yang does a number on record books with win over Woods in PGA championship

RedEye

Yep, you heard right. Tiger Woods coughed up a two-stroke lead Sunday. In the final round of the PGA Championship. To someone named Y.E. Yang. The 37-year-old South Korean pulled off the stunner with a fantastic closing run, draining a clutch birdie putt on the last hole that cinched the win. How shocking was Yang's victory over Woods? We'll let the numbers tell the story.

Y.E. Yang celebrates Sunday after his birdie putt on the 18th hole gave him the PGA Championship title at Hazeltine National Golf Club in Chaska, Minn. Tiger Woods (right) finished second. mcr Tiger's good, but he could always have a bad day. Guess this is one of those days.”

Y.E. YANG

“[Yang] went out there and executed his game plan. ... I think he played beautifully.”

1 What did we learn from the Bears’ preseason opener?	That Jay Cutler is the answer ... to the question: “Will I still be soiling my pants on every third-and-long?”	We met the new quarterback, same as the old quarterback.	While Jesus had 12 disciples, the Bears’ messiah will be hard-pressed to find three receivers.	That Cutler’s Saturday night in Buffalo STILL was better than Patrick Kane’s was last week.	They were who I thought they were.
2 What is something Patrick Kane should NOT say Monday when he talks about his arrest in Buffalo?	“Thanks for the tough questions, guys. Anyone want to give me a ride home?”	“Common cents.”	“Can anyone break a $20?”	“Bob Probert is taking me under his wing while Scottie Pippen gave me a few tips on tipping.”	“That’s my side of the story. Anyone got a problem with that?”
3 The only thing faster than Usain Bolt is ...	... Jimmy, from his bourbon to the toilet.	(Let me apologize in advance) ... his brother, Lightning.	... a sack of White Castle sliders through my intestinal tract.	... the Cubs’ season getting flushed down the toilet.	... my hard drive after a daylong defrag.
4 Which team had a better weekend: Cubs or White Sox?	The Cubs. Leave it to Pittsburgh to provide the slump busters.	Until there’s a “championship weekend,” I’m not going to bother answering that.	Just like the rain did to the Air & Water Show, it was a wash.	The White Sox. They were the best baseball AND football team in Oakland.	The Cubs, who got some jet fly-bys. Those are some sexy machines.
5 Name one thing Tiger Woods could do better.	Let’s be honest: kind of a boring dresser. Has he ever considered faux chinchilla?	He’s a heck of a swinger. Don’t tell Mrs. Woods.	I do believe his post-shot-making fist-pump could use some work.	Worst Facebook friend I have.	He could upgrade his human behavior software to better blend in.

OAKLAND 3, WHITE SOX 2

Mark Ellis lined a home run just over the left-field wall with two outs in the ninth inning as Oakland avoided a three-game sweep with a 3-2 win over the Sox on Sunday. The homer came off Bobby Jenks (2-4), who previously had posted five straight scoreless outings.

» Slumping outfielder Carlos Quentin—1-for-15 over his three previous games—had the day off.

CUBS VS. PITTSBURGH, POSTPONED

After a 3-hour, 15-minute rain delay, the Cubs-Pirates game was called off Sunday. No makeup date was announced.

» Carlos Zambrano promises to follow a new workout regimen to strengthen stomach muscles and prevent another trip to the disabled list after it was announced he would return to the Cubs' rotation a week from Tuesday against Washington. "My problem is I've been lazy," Zambrano said Sunday. "There are things in life you don't like to do, but you have to do them. I don't like abs [abdominal muscles workouts] but I have to do them. I have to start doing them every day and be serious about it."

Steltz steps it up

Bears secondary coach Jon Hoke said last week Craig Steltz had no reason to sulk despite a pre-training camp demotion.

"It's early," Hoke said. "People change when they get into games. He'll have his opportunities. There's nothing etched in stone. And I'm sure things will start to fall his way."

Hoke's words were prophetic as Steltz responded with an interception, a forced fumble and five tackles in Saturday's 27-20 exhibition loss to Buffalo.

He picked off Bills third-string quarterback Gilbran Hamdan and returned it 41 yards, setting up Caleb Hanie's 10-yard touchdown toss to rookie Will Ta'ufo'ou in the third quarter.

Steltz, a second-year player from LSU, was supposed to be in position to start at free safety with Mike Brown gone, but the Bears opted to move Danieal Manning back to the starting position.

Steltz has kept a positive attitude throughout.

"I'm just going to continue to work hard and get better every day," he said. "All you can do is go out there and make plays when you have your opportunities. In camp, those plays just weren't happening for me. But I just have to keep working hard."

» Usain Bolt ran 100 meters in 9.58 seconds Sunday at the world championships in Berlin, breaking his own world record set at the Beijing Olympics by an incredible 11-hundredths of a second.

» Pro wrestler and Olympic gold medalist Kurt Angle has been arrested on charges of possessing a human growth hormone and violating an order of protection in suburban Pittsburgh.

» Blackhawks star Patrick Kane is expected Monday to make his first public comments about last week's arrest in Buffalo.

» Fire 2, Kansas City 0 » David Beckham suspended for Wednesday's game at Chicago » Brian Vickers wins his first Sprint Cup race of season

The Cubs took care of the Pirates. Here comes another last-place team—and this time no Jake Peavy.

Debbie (or David?) Downer

Scenario: Part of being a friend is providing a shoulder to cry on, but some whiners take it way too far. It can be emotionally taxing to deal with a friend who personifies Rachel Dratch's "Debbie Downer" from "SNL."

What to do: Wake up—or break up. How to do it: When the problem first surfaces, tell the friend that you want to be supportive, but can't listen to the same sob story over and over. "A friend did that to me once and, at first, I was crushed," said local life coach Ionna Chaney of the downtown-based Forward Alliance therapy center. "By the fifth or sixth time, she told me she wanted to talk to me, but just not about that subject. I took it as a wake-up call."

friend DIVORCE

Your attention, if you please

Scenario: It's not your friend's fault, but he or she happens to be a major attention-getter everywhere the two of you go. Still, every time your bestie turns heads, it turns your stomach. Jealous much?

What to do: Make up.

How to do it: In this case, there is nothing to say to your friend, but you can take individual action. "Just try not to go everywhere with this friend," life coach Chaney said of an issue she usually finds in male friendships. "There's no reason to break up over that." You heard the lady: Get out there and find some aesthetically challenged chums. Their lack of personality is your chance to shine!

REDEYE

Have you ever beefed with a best friend?

We're not talking a dispute over who's the hottest guy on "Gossip Girl" or the next heir to Michael Jordan's throne.

We're talking a full-blown relationship rift—the kind that involves screaming, hair-pulling and totally ignoring each other. It can feel like a bad breakup, local relationship experts told RedEye. But at least with a significant other the rules of the split are somewhat clear: You cut ties, move on, start to date other people.

Not so simple when it comes to your friends, who may share your contacts or favorite haunts, or know some of your shadiest secrets. Cutting them out completely could be hazardous to your social life, local relationship experts warned.

So how do you know when you're facing defriendable offenses? How do you break it to a friend that it's absolutely over? Do you have to return their texts? What about tweets? Should they be able to see your Facebook photos?

Don't panic. RedEye's got your back.

Check out our instructional guide to common friend FAILs. We'll tell you whether you and your friend should make up, wake up or break up. KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM

Rich friend, poor friend

Scenario: 'Memba that "Friends" episode when the poor friends (Rachel, Phoebe and Joey) briefly beefed with their wealthier buds (Ross, Monica and Chandler) because they couldn't afford to hang out at ritzier locales? That is definitely a realistic scenario, said Chaney. So what do you do if you and a pal are clashing over cash?

What to do: Make up.

How to do it: "If you're the rich friend, try to come up with ideas of somewhere you can enjoy each other's company, say at a home where you bring drinks over," Chaney said. And if you're the poor friend, speak up: "Tell the wealthier friend that you are not envious of their money, but the fact that you can't spend like them is your reality," Chaney advised.

Don't tease me, bro!

Scenario: Your "friend" likes to bombard you with a combo of backhanded compliments and in-your-face insults. Picture the princess of the Plastics, Regina, from "Mean Girls."

What to do: Break up.

How to do it: This is key, especially if you speak to the friend repeatedly and he or she doesn't stop serving up the haterade. Talk to your pal in person if you can, said Chaney and downtown psychotherapist Charleen Krombeen, but if you sense it could turn into a shriek fest, e-mail is an effective alternative. "There are some people who yell, who interrupt and who accuse," said Krombeen, advising a carefully crafted e-mail that also invites the friend to talk it out over the phone or in person later. "Some might consider it cowardly. But it's better than a Post-it note."

Only a stand-up act

Scenario: Your friend constantly blows you off or stands you up, typically for his or her significant other.

What to do: Wake up.

How to do it: This is an issue that can be serious because it breaks down trust between friends, according to Krombeen. Address it before it gets that far. Communicate, preferably in person, and not necessarily at the time of the alleged abandonment. "Put yourself in the other person's shoes and try to understand their perspective," Krombeen told RedEye. She said the slighted friends should emphasize they miss their friends' company and not be accusatory or offensive. Hey, maybe pull a page from Champ in "Anchorman." When Ron Burgundy starts dating co-anchor Veronica Corningstone, Champ laments to his pal Burgundy: "I miss your musk. When this all gets sorted out, I think you and me should get an apartment together." That should do the trick.

Why can't we be friends?

RedEye asked the Twittiverse what actions or attitudes would prompt them to drop a friend. Here are a few of their deadly friend sins.

@katemp80

I was telling a friend a story when she interrupts saying "when u going to lose weight again? U know, get back in shape?"

@briansalgado

Money. It's the reason I won't lend any amount I can't afford to lose.

@WalkerRLawrence

I think the obvious one. Sleeping with your spouse. Or maybe a bit more unique, standing one up at Comic-Con :)

@Krepthin

Lying, undependable, untrustworthy, mean.

@ProfesorMarvel

when they start acting like your girlfriend/boyfriend and it's unwelcome on your end. total deal breaker and obnoxious.

@AaronBSam

It's over with good friends if it ever comes down to physical harm, major theft or they stop laughing at my jokes.

WARNING!! WARNING!! WARNING!! WARNING!! WARNING!! WARNING!! WA

Danger, Will Robinson! Ending a friendship comes with risks attached—with social networking shenanigans at the top of the list. (Passive-aggressive updates, unflattering tagged photos or insulting tweets, anyone?) But all is not lost, our local experts say. Here are some steps you can take if you fear friends will go scorched-earth you on if you cut them off cold turkey.

» Limit phone calls and texts, starting out by taking a bit longer to return incoming communications, local psycho-therapist Charlotte Krombeen said, and then trail off completely.

» Limit one-on-one visits. In fact, you may want to only interact with the friend in a larger group, local life coach Ionna Chaney advised.

» Restrict their access on your social networks, i.e., put them in a limited group on Facebook and MySpace, Krombeen said.

BIRTHDAY
LEO

July 23 to Aug. 22
You're putting an end to the melodrama, the pain and the torment.
An optimistic new moon is helping you to make a fresh start. Break up with that dysfunctional person or get therapy to solve your problems as a couple.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

The sun is entering your sign, bringing you four weeks of relative sanity.
This is a good thing since your emotions have been rocky lately.
For once, you'll be hopeful about your chances for happily ever after instead of obsessing about dying at 70, alone, with cats.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You need to have
"the talk." The moon is making it impossible to ignore certain, um, issues. No, it's not cool for the dog to sleep in the bed. No, it's not acceptable for your partner to "forget" to pay the bills. Get tough and get real.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Venus has you discovering a new method of turning your partner on. You'll find that secret spot that makes your girlfriend squeal with glee. Or you'll read your guy's journal and learn what he really wants his girl to do for him.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Work is totally bumming you out.
You need some sensual escape. If you're single, call up a former flame to see if he or she would like to become a current flame. If you're with someone, break out of your usual bedroom routine.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Remember the one who got away?
He or she could turn up when you least expect it. You'll receive an invite to add your ex as a friend on Facebook, or you'll stumble upon an old e-mail in your "junk" folder that is a confession about how your ex never got over you. Wow!

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The moon opposite your sign has you feeling peevish. Don't be cruel to your partner just because you're in a bad mood. Don't tell her that, yes, those jeans do make her look fat. Don't chide him for making less money than you do or having a receding hairline.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

The sun is opposite your sign, giving you a queasy,
"What the hell is going on?" feeling. Don't expect much romantic clarity. It could be a roller coaster ride, so hang on. In the meantime, realize this is a weather trend that soon will pass.

Aries

March 21-April 19

A bouncy new moon is putting you in a frisky mood. You'll play footsie under the dinner table with your honey or put the moves on a casual friend in the hopes of creating a friends-with-benefits scenario.
You horn dog, you.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

You've been obsessing about your appearance, but the sun says you have nothing to worry about. Your tightest jeans suddenly fit you perfectly. Your hair is behaving for the first time in months. Can you handle the fabulous?

Gemini

May 21-June 21

As an air sign, you collect people. This week, Mars is bringing some eccentric folks your way.
You could develop a fatal attraction for a gloomy goth chick or find yourself drawn to a funky, offbeat guy with weird habits.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

Issues of hearth and home are on your mind. You've realized that you and your partner aren't sharing a love nest. You're living in a dump. Saturn is inspiring you to improve your domestic environment. Do some cleaning, renovating or just move.

Tales from Miami

Khloe and the newly preppers Kourtney Kardashian dropped in at Enclave nightclub Saturday night to promote their new E! reality show, "Kourtney and Khloe Take Miami." The Kardashian sisters have made a lot of headlines lately, but they were only willing to address certain topics in an interview with my intern Nichole Berry. Kourtney did not want to talk about her pregnancy, but she did concede that she is off the market.

You said you guys went to Miami because you were single, what's your status now?

Khloe: I'm still single. [Turns to Kourtney] What are you?

Kourtney: And I ... am not single.

Khloe: Obviously.

You guys seem like a tight-knit family. How was it to break away and do your own thing in Miami and be the "stars" of the show?

Khloe: In my mind I'm always the star of anything I do. I'm just confident. ... I think we all shine in our own way, so I don't think in ["Keeping Up With the Kardashians"] that there's a star.

Khloe: I just liked that we set a goal for ourselves and we went [to Miami] with our mission. We really opened our store and it's doing great, and that was the perfect accomplishment.

So we know Kourtney kissed a girl and liked it. What about you, Khloe?

Khloe: No I've never kissed a girl. Not really my thing.

Kourtney: She kissed some boys though.

Khloe: I don't mind watching [Kourtney].

Kourtney: I think she kissed only a boy when we were there.

Khloe: No, I kissed a few, can't lie.

Kourtney: There was one on camera, then.

Piven large

Jeremy Piven wants to sell America on his new comedy, "The Goods: Live Hard, Sell Hard." The "Old School" star walked the red carpet at the AMC River East on Thursday to promote "The Goods," where he boldly told my intern Sydney Park that the film is "the funniest I've ever been in. Bar none."

The Piv brought his mom, Joyce, and a young blonde to the premiere, but he insisted that he's still single. Thursday wasn't all about the movie: Piven, an avid Cubs fan, also relayed how excited he was to throw the first pitch and sing "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" at Friday's afternoon game at Wrigley.

TONY DANZA'S TEACHERLY QUALITIES

Yo, teach!

TEACHING CONFLICT

Not everyone is impressed with A&E's proposed show, "Teach." Philadelphia Daily News columnist Ronnie Polaneczky called the show a way "to pimp our kids' education to an unemployed sitcom actor who wants to kick-start his stalled career on the backs of students who'll be distracted by cameras and microphones."

But Mayor Michael Nutter is urging school commissioners to approve the deal. In a letter made public Wednesday, he noted students would be given opportunities they wouldn't normally have—including production internships on the show—and the district might see a bump in teacher recruitment. AP

Remember Tony Danza?

You know him as the guy who plays Tony in reruns of the '70s and '80s series "Taxi." Also, the guy who plays Tony in reruns of the '80s and '90s series "Who's the Boss?"

Anyway, you might be seeing him in prime time again soon. Pending approval by city school officials, he's going to be teaching at a Philadelphia school this fall for a reality TV show called "Teach." The series, slated to air on A&E, would have Danza co-teaching a 10th-grade English class. Seriously.

Of course, not everyone is impressed with the idea—one critic said it's pimping out kids for entertainment—but we're willing to see how things play out. The question is: Would Danza make a good teacher? RedEye just got the (highly unscientific) results back from the lab.

AP CONTRIBUTED.

"As always with The Autobarn, you can assume we'll have a great selection at a great value!"

Fame shame

Hailey Glassman, Jon Gosselin's kind-of-ex-girlfriend, has a message for the gossip-reading public: "I'm not some fame whore." Glassman, whose past was dug up for the world to see after she was linked to Gosselin, tells "E! News," "Take back my 15 minutes [of fame], you can have it back." Glassman also says she doesn't believe her relationship with Gosselin played a role in Jon's split with wife and "Jon & Kate Plus 8" co-star Kate Gosselin. The full interview is set to air Monday on E!
